

Full Moon:
Jeff Landgraf

Hello beautiful full moon,
I know you are there,
Bright crystal in the black sky,
Rays of light shining down, connecting every lover to every other,
Lines stronger than any betrayal or disappointment,
Lines drawn between everyone who ever cast their eyes to the sky,
Who ever dreamed,
Or hoped,
Or wished.
Connections that can not ever be broken,
For love is light,
And to see its beauty you need only look up into the black sky,
And believe that her light,
Can still burn its way through the clouds.
Believe that these hearts cloaked in fear and confusion,
Can still look up,
Can still open themselves,
And bask in the light cast down by the beauty of the full moon.
Even tonight,
As the winds blow,
And the rains fall,
When the beautiful lines of light binding us together,
Are invisible to these poor eyes,
Tethered, as they are, by the chains of loss,
That hold our hearts fast, under this canopy of darkness.